

Financially Fit Employees Are More Engaged and Productive

The Life Game shows your employees how today's financial decisions may affect the future.

Game play presents real-world scenarios, creates opportunities to make better choices, and provides targeted education based on results.

The screenshot displays the 'Financially ready? Tell us about...' interface. It includes sections for 'Your family' (You, Wife, Daughter, Baby in...), 'Your Savings & Debt' (Total household savings: $200,000, Total household debt: $175,000, Total annual income: $130,000), 'Your Investment Strategy' (Conservative to Aggressive slider), and 'Own a home?'. A 'Pink Slip!' scenario is highlighted, stating: 'It's 2042, and you're 63 years old. You have $714,369 in savings, and $386,594 in household debt. Downsized! You'll get 3 months of severance, but in this job market, you'll be out of work awhile. Where will you find 6 months of living expenses?'. The interface also shows sliders for 'What percent will you pay from savings?', 'Do you want to adjust...', 'The percentage of income you use to pay down debt', 'The percentage of income you save', and 'Your investment strategy'. A 'Continue the game' button is visible at the bottom right.

Money is a top stressor¹ and stressed workers cost employers $413/year, almost as much as smokers do at $587/year.²
